Acceptable Use Policy and Terms of Service

Last Updated: Feb 03, 2014

Misuse of Service

- Sending unsolicited mail messages - sending junk mail or other advertising material to individuals who did not specifically request such material.
- Running bots to post "spam" or "advertising" on any web sites.
- Forging of mail header information.
- Hacking, Cracking and Port Scanning for gaining access to unauthorized systems.
- Disrupting or attempting to disrupt other systems (often known as "Denial of Service").
- Running BitTorrent to host and distribute copyrighted or unauthorized media or content.
- Storing and distributing virus, trojan horses or other tools to compromise other systems or web sites.
- Engaging in any activities or actions that would violate the personal privacy rights of others.
- Hosting web sites containing hacking, cracking, pornographic and copyrighted content.
- Hosting any phishing web sites in an effort to steal personal and financial information.
- Running a public proxy server within our environment is prohibited.

Risk of Data Loss

While we strive to provide an enterprise platform for our services, there are always chances that problems could arise such as natural disasters, bugs resided within hardware or software, vulnerabilities and weak passwords set within customers' servers. These issues are beyond our scope or awareness. Customers should always be responsible for their own security and data integrity of their servers.

Bandwidth Usage

Bandwidth usage is not limited but may be throttled to the given user when it starts to impact the quality of service.

Invoicing and Payments

- Any service termination should be requested 15 days prior the service renewal due date.
- Subscribers should pre-pay their services before their service renewal dates.
- Reactivation may be subject to reactivation fees.

Acceptable Use Policy and Terms of Service may be subject to change without notice. We reserve the right to revise its policies at any time. Please check it regularly for updates.
